Dear Davis,

Thanks a lot for introducing Emily Ruppel, the new environmental officer in the U.S. Embassy.

I'm glad to learn you and Nadtya gave her an outline of our collaborative work in Chile and it is good news she is eager to learn quickly about the variety of environmental issues in our country.

We are absolutely available to invite her to our office to meet the Superintendent Cristian Franz and the staff.

The only problem is that we are in the middle of winter holidays now, and the Superintendent himself won't be coming at work this whole week; this apply to some other SMA members as well (not to me though).

To summarize: it is great if she wants to visit us during this week, but Cristian Franz won't show up.

Ivan Honorato and myself can always meet her up if she pleases.

Then let me know what would it be the path to follow.

Regards,

p.s.: your english is fine 😊

David,

I would like to introduce the new environmental officer in the U.S. Embassy in Chile. Emily Ruppel will be arriving next week and will pick up the environmental cooperation portfolio which includes the EPA-SMA cooperation, among other things. Nadtya and I met with her today to give her an overview of our work there, and she is eager to learn very quickly about the range of environmental issues in Chile. I took the liberty of passing on your name as a great contact, and was hoping at some point you might invite her to the office to meet Cristian and the crew. I told her about our upcoming training course, and suggested she might try to attend as a good excuse to get out of Santiago.

Disculpe mi inglés, pero escribo mucho más rápido así. Puede responder en español; Emily habla español, pero todavía no habla chileno.
